Campaign Guide

Prologue

Holding back the forces of darkness has never been easy, nor safe. Your latest endeavors left you hospitalized in Saint Mary's. You don't regret your daring actions, but the internal bleeding sure makes you wish you'd been more careful.

As the weeks tick by in extended care, you find your mind dwelling greatly on death. Despite the hospital being at the forefront of modern medicine, many patients experience sudden and tragic ends. You thank your lucky stars that your injuries will heal, as your doctors tell you.

But towards the end of your month in Saint Mary's, you find yourself gravely ill. While Dr. Maheswaran will not tell you exactly what's going wrong, the writing's on the wall: your condition has become a matter of life and death. She treads carefully around the topic, but her mousy colleague with the wild eyes treats you like a lost cause.

The remaining moments are a blur. Being wheeled into surgery. Two figures in surgical garb screaming at each other. A sharp, stinging pain. A pair of unsettling emerald eyes…

~~Prologue...~~

~~Do you hear it? The call is ancient.~~
~~A mourning chorus, sung for millennia in all that live and die.~~
~~Heed the call. Serve my cause.~~
~~It is only a matter of time.~~

- For the remainder of the campaign, the first time you read a block of text that references you reading it (whether or not you were supposed to), resolve that text.
- Each investigator who reads this begins the next scenario with 2 additional resources.

Scenario I: Late Risers

3:40 PM:

The clock ticks idly away on the wall. Your mind rests in the trench between consciousness and idle slumber. You roll your head to the side, and chance the opening of an eye.

A disfigured corpse lies on the table across from you.

You bolt upright, taking in your surroundings. A large room. A pickled smell. A few hanging lights. Corpses. Several. And the loud clock, ticking away, reading 3:42pm.

You realize, with some concern, that you are in a morgue.

You tear yourself off a cold stone table, and take a moment to catch your breath and make sure you are not merely in a nightmare. Unfortunately, this is all too real.

Sitting just by your table are your belongings, haphazardly laid out on trays labeled with your name and a date. As you find some small comfort in dressing, your eyes wander to the other tables.

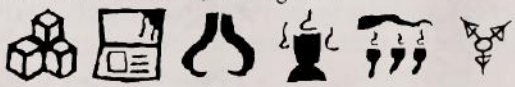

The corpses are in terrible shape. Their veins are a sickly emerald hue, and their flesh is… warped. Limbs at odd angles, features displaced. The worst, a huge and grotesque thing, seems to have been mixed up with parts from a deer. You shiver to think of what might have damaged the human body in this way.

Before you have the chance to consider further, a gunshot fires off from a nearby room. You whip your head around and see, to your dismay, that the door has several pieces of furniture piled against it. Worse, a strange gas swirls slowly in from under the door. A gas the same green shade as the veins of the bodies.

This is going to be one of those days.

Scenario Setup

- Gather all cards from the following encounter sets: Late Risers, Agency Survivors, Gifts of the Plaguebearer, Haze of Miasma, The Plaguebearer's Commands, Striking Fear.

- Set the following cards aside, out of play: Agent Greyson, First Among Many, Suspicious Briefcase, both copies of Agency Troubleshooter, both copies of Twisted Supplicant.
- Put the Morgue and Lab Omega locations into play. Set each other location aside, out of play. Each investigator begins play at the Morgue.
- Place resources on Lab Omega corresponding to its "Barricade" value, as Barricades. (Note: it has a value)
- Shuffle the remainder of the encounter cards to build the encounter deck.

DO NOT READ
until the end of the scenario

If no resolution was reached and at least one investigator resigned: Go to Resolution 2.

If no resolution was reached because each investigator was defeated: Go to Resolution 1.

Resolution 1: You feel a heavy arm shake you from unconsciousness. "Buddy? Buddy, you alright?"
The portly man standing above you has a look of concern on his face. Seeing you wake, he smiles broadly. "Thank goodness. Dead customers tend to be bad for business."
He flips a rag over his shoulder and sticks out a hand. "Hibbs. Seems like you got a bit overserved, friend."

You protest. The facility. The monsters. The agents. The gas!

"Don't know what you're talking about. You're in my establishment- Hibbs' Roadhouse, best speakeasy you can afford. You probably had too much to drink. Found you passed out in one of the booths. Simple as that."

You press him. If this is a speakeasy, where are the customers? "Funny thing. That gas you mentioned? That's the one thing you said that makes any sense. But before that, I think you need something to eat."

- Each investigator earns experience equal to the Victory X value of each card in the victory display.
- In your Campaign Log, record that the Tailors contained the problem.
- If the investigators put out a fire, record in your Campaign Log that the collection was saved.

Resolution 2:You fling open the hatch and pull yourself up into some sort of storage room. You run forward, flinging open the door to… a dingy bar. Startled, you stare about the place. Could this really be on top of that strange facility?

You hear someone clearing their throat and turn to find yourself face to face with an aproned man gripping a shotgun. "I don't recognize you, friend. And they say I'm supposed to deal with anyone I don't recognize."

After a tense moment, he lowers the weapon. "Heck, it ain't loaded. I'm no killer. Never had the nerve. Just… anyone from the Tailor Agency asks, I tried to stop you, okay?"

He offers you a burly hand, which you tentatively accept. "Name's Hibbert. Call me Hibbs. This here's my roadhouse."

You inquire as to the facility below. "Brook facility- where the Tailors research some of the local weirdness. They pays me to provide a cover and not to talk about it. So I'm not gonna talk about it."

You insist. The monsters! The gas! "Got some bad news for you, friend. That's not just down there. Come sit. You look like you could use something to eat."

- Each investigator earns experience equal to the Victory X value of each card in the victory display.
- If Agent Greyson is in the victory display, record in your Campaign Log that the First claimed The Facility
- In your Campaign Log, record that the investigators learned the secret of the roadhouse
- If the investigators put out a fire, record in your Campaign Log that the collection was saved.
- If an investigator finished the scenario with the Suspicious Briefcase asset under their control, they must add it to their deck. It does not count against their deck size. For the remainder of the campaign, the current controller of Suspicious Briefcase gains: "Additional Setup: You begin each game with Suspicious Briefcase in play."

Resolution 3:As you climb a rickety stair, Greyson explains. "I work for an agency called the Tailors. We deal with the things that go bump in the night. This facility is the Brook, our research base. Not sure how you wound up down there, but if you're not one of them, we're on the same side."

"It's bad out there, in Arkham. Whatever this fog is, it's spreading. I've been cleaning up down below, but our doorman and resident local can tell you more about the situation."

Greyson throws open the door at the top of the stairs, revealing a dingy barhouse. "Hibbs? We have visitors. Mind fixing them a bite to eat?"
The portly man smiles, offers a handshake, then gets to work.

- Each investigator earns experience equal to the Victory X value of each card in the victory display.
- In your Campaign Log, record that you earned Greyson's respect.
- In your Campaign Log, record that the investigators learned the secret of the roadhouse.
- If the investigators put out a fire, record in your Campaign Log that the collection was saved.
- If an investigator finished the scenario with the Suspicious Briefcase asset under their control, they must add it to their deck. It does not count against their deck size. For the remainder of the campaign, the current controller of Suspicious Briefcase gains: "Additional Setup: You begin each game with Suspicious Briefcase in play."

Scenario II: Night On The Town

7:21 PM:

Hibbs stares as you wolf down a plate of greasy breakfast food. The burly man takes a moment, then speaks:

"It started about three days back. These strange fogs started rolling through town. Arkham being what it is, most people just assumed something had gone wrong at a factory downriver and went about their business. But then folks started getting sick. Gave folks weird rashes, some sort of disgusting skin thing. Folks by then were starting to get a bit wary, but business kept up.

Then, yesterday, Doc Pickman wandered into Providence Square with a deer's head fused to his neck. Both heads were screaming.

Government types showed up to put a stop to it, but the word was out. By the time we realized the mists were spreading from folks who were badly infected, the suits had already let a lot of troops get too close. Now there's a bunch of those things wandering around town. Attacking people. And even more of that terrible miasma.

The word on the street is to hole up somewhere safe tonight. Lots of folks practically live here at my roadhouse, so I thought I'd open up and let em gather. Honestly, though, I'm worried how much we'll be able to defend the place." Hibbs quiets for a beat, thinking.

"You seem like hardy people, friend. If you're really concerned about the monsters, best thing you can do is help get folks safe. Arkham's full of places where people might be holing up. If you could round people up and help to shore up some safe havens… well, tomorrow, I'm sure there'll be plenty of folks happy to help you figure out your memory lapse."

Setup

- Gather all cards from the following encounter sets: Night on the Town, Fallen Arkham, Haze of Miasma, Ancient Evils, The Midnight Masks.

- When gathering cards from The Midnight Masks, use only the copies of "Hunting Shadow".
- When gathering cards from Fallen Arkham, use only the locations and each copy of "Grinning Victim".
- Put the Hibbs Roadhouse (Spirits and Success), General Store (Anything and Everything), Orne Library (Repository of Knowledge), and Bank of Arkham (Investing In Our Future) locations into play. The investigators begin at Hibbs Roadhouse.
- Choose either River Docks (Skilled Labor) and Arkham Advertiser (Current Events). Put that location into play.
- Choose either Ma's Boarding House (Friendly Comforts) and Ye Olde Magick Shoppe (Power at a Price). Put that location into play.
- Put 4 clues on each location.
- Of the two locations not in play, choose one at random. When the game begins, find the set aside story asset referred to on the revealed location and resolve the text on the back of that asset as though it flipped due to the agenda.
- Shuffle the remainder of the encounter cards to build the encounter deck.

Defend

Some cards in this scenario have a Defend action on them. When you Defend, rather than testing an investigator skill, you test the numeric value, relative to your investigator, that the card specifies. For example, if a location instructs you to test "Resources in pool", you would make a test, treating the number of resources in your resource pool as your skill value for that test. The testing investigator's value is used regardless of the presence of other investigators.

- You cannot commit cards to Defend tests or use player card effects that increase your skill value on Defend tests.

DO NOT READ
until the end of the scenario

If there are six locations with a resource on them: Proceed to Resolution 2

Otherwise: Proceed to Resolution 1

Resolution 1: Things are getting bad out there. You had hoped that your experiences in the facility were exceptional, but it seems as though all of Arkham is swiftly moving in the same direction. It's possible that no matter what action you take to keep people safe, it won't be enough against the spreading tide of miasmic corruption.

Unless, of course, you can cut it off at the source. Find where this evil spreads from and stop it. The strange disease-ridden monster that appeared by the general store leaves you thinking - perhaps there's something around there that serves as the source of it all…

- Each investigator earns experience equal to the Victory X value of each card in the victory display.
- In your Campaign Log, under the heading for each location, record Defended under the name of each location that has "Survivors", and record Infected under the name of each location that has a "Ruin".
- If there are three or more locations recorded as Defended, and Hibb's Roadhouse is recorded as Defended, record in your Campaign Log that Hibbs has your back.

Resolution 2: You've done it. Thanks to you, countless citizens of Arkham will survive the night to come. These creatures, dangerous as they may be, won't defeat this city. Not tonight.

Despite your victory, you can't stop the sinking feeling that no matter how many people make it through, it won't be enough against the spreading tide of miasmic corruption.

Unless, of course, you can cut it off at the source. Find where this evil spreads from and stop it. The strange disease-ridden monster that appeared by the general store leaves you thinking - perhaps there's something around there that serves as the source of it all…

- Each investigator earns experience equal to the Victory X value of each card in the victory display.
- Record in your campaign log that Arkham stands united.
- In your Campaign Log, under the heading for each location, record Defended under the name of each location that has "Survivors", and record Infected under the name of each location that has a "Ruin".

Interlude I: Friends in Low Places

Check Campaign Log:

- If *Hibbs has your back*or Arkham stands united, proceed to Friends in Low Places 1.
- Otherwise, proceed to Friends in Low Places 4.

Friends in Low Places 1:Rivertown is quiet. With most of the remaining citizens of Arkham holed up, the streets have only flickering street lamps to keep you company. Strangely, the creatures have also vanished, along with most of the choking fogs.

An hour into your exploration in the Rivertown neighborhood, you're startled by a hand on your shoulder. You turn to strike, but find Hibbs standing with a grin.
"Easy, friend! Heard you were somewhere around here, figured I'd come and lend a hand for a while. It's the least I could do given all the help you did for me. Just for a while, though. Afterwards, well…"

- Record in your Campaign Log that Hibbs is here to help.
- Check Campaign Log. If you know the secret of the roadhouse, proceed to Friends in Low Places 2.
- Otherwise, proceed to Friends in Low Places 3

Friends in Low Places 2: Hibbs pauses for a moment, staring at the ground. He squares his shoulders and looks you in the eyes. "Actually, no. You got the savvy to have made it past the suits, and you care about this city. You got a good head on your shoulders. City doesn't need me to keep the Agency's secrets. City'd be better off if I stick around and help you put a stop to this. Besides, it's not like you aren't already in the know. From now on, I'm with you."

- Any one investigator may choose to add Hibbs (Here to Help) to their deck for the remainder of the campaign. This card does not count against that investigator's deck size.
- Add one to the chaos bag for the remainder of the campaign.
- Proceed to Scenario 3: Dead By Dawn

Friends in Low Places 3: Hibbs pauses for a moment, staring at the ground. He slumps his shoulders and speaks. "After we find you a lead, I head back. Got a lot of folks safe at the roadhouse, but you never know what could go wrong. There has to be someone there to make sure everyone stays put. So I'll help you search and then return. That'll leave us square."

- Add one to the chaos bag for the remainder of the campaign.
- Proceed to Scenario 3: Dead By Dawn

Friends in Low Places 4:Rivertown is quiet. With most of the remaining citizens of Arkham holed up, the streets have only flickering street lamps to keep you company. Strangely, the creatures have also vanished, along with most of the choking fogs.

An hour into your exploration in the Rivertown neighborhood, you round a corner and walk directly into a cloud of the glowing haze. Your eyes lose focus, and for a moment, you see through many eyes at once. You see one self weaving robes of flesh and reciting twisted chants. Another howls, and slowly drags itself arm over arm from a deep tunnel into dark woods. Another stares over a corpse and curses fate. The ~~Plaguebearer~~ stares through darkness at a small blue sphere, dangling below a colossal red palm that drips green ichor from a stigmata.

~~My return draws near~~

The miasma recedes, and your self returns.

- Record in your Campaign Log that you have received a twisted gift

~~I grant you this because you cannot stop me~~

- Add one to the chaos bag for the remainder of the campaign.
- Proceed to Scenario 3: Dead By Dawn

Friends in Low Places 5:

~~How can you expect to contain me when you cannot even contain your curiosity?~~

- Each investigator who reads this begins the next scenario with a horror (in addition to any mental trauma) and an additional card in hand.

Scenario III: Dead by Dawn

12:54 AM:

Intro 1: Midnight comes and goes with little progress. The quiet streets of Rivertown seem to hold no signs as to the source of the monstrosities you've been fighting against. Just as you're considering finding somewhere to catch some sleep, your attention is caught by the sound of wheels rattling on unpaved stones. You peer into a nearby alley, and see a man in a doctor's coat trying to push a wobbling gurney through a side door. A man whose face you recognize.

It takes you a moment to place him, but the mousy figure can only be Doctor West - one of your two attending physicians at St. Mary's. What is he doing here? At this time of night? With a dead body?

Before you can answer, several cars come barreling down the street. By the time they've passed, West is nowhere to be seen.

Check Campaign Log.

- If the investigators "have earned Greyson's respect", proceed to Intro 2.
- If "The First claimed the facility", proceed to Intro 3.
- Otherwise, proceed to Intro 4.

Intro 2: You look down the street, and see a band of armed agents pouring out of the cars. To your surprise, Agent Greyson exits the lead car. Before she can turn to address the gathered agents, you run out and flag her down.

"Certainly didn't expect to see you all here. Can't be a coincidence, though. We're looking for Asset Delta-Two. He's an expert. Might know how to stop all this. Goes by Herbert West. He-"

You interrupt, explaining your connection to the man, as well as what you just saw. Greyson eyes you with surprise.

"Aren't you full of the unexpected? Well, if you're up to it, we're going in after him. What do you say - feel like joining the cavalry?"

- Skip to Setup.

Intro 3: You look down the street, and see a band of armed agents pouring out of the cars. A cruel looking man in a vest exits the lead car, throwing a cigarette onto the ground and grinding it out. He turns to address the gathered agents.

"Listen up, boys. We've tracked Asset Delta-Two back to this location. You want payback for all the good men these freaks have killed? For Greyson? Well, Delta-Two knows how to get it. He's not gonna come easy, so any force short of lethal on the target is authorized. Anyone else could be infected, so kill on sight." The man grins like a shark.

Either Delta-Two is West, or the doctor is in real danger. Regardless, you need to get to him before these agents do - he might know how you got into this whole mess!

- Skip to Setup.

Intro 4: You look down the street, and see a band of armed agents pouring out of the cars. To your surprise, Agent Greyson exits the lead car. You sneak closer as she addresses the gathered agents.

"Alright, Tailors. We've tracked Asset Delta-Two back to this condemned brownstone. We believe Delta-Two knows how we might put a stop to all this. However, he should be considered extremely dangerous in his own right, and is unlikely to come with us willingly. Do what you have to do. Finally, anyone else you run into isn't cleared for Delta-Two's experiments. Terminate any civilians you find."

Either Delta-Two is West, or the doctor is in real danger. Regardless, you need to get to him before these agents do - he might know how you got into this whole mess!

Scenario Setup

- Gather all cards from the following encounter sets: Dead by Dawn, Agency Survivors, Gifts of the Plaguebearer, Tenuous Allies, Chilling Cold.

- When gathering cards from Gifts of the Plaguebearer, do not include "Twisted Supplicant".
- When gathering cards from the Tenuous Allies set, include only each copy of "Tenuous Allies".
- Set the West's Laboratory location aside, out of play. Put each other location into play.

- Shuffle each one sided Re-Animated enemy together to form the Re-Animated deck. Set the top card of the deck aside.
- Check Campaign Log. If "Hibbs is here to help", search each player's deck and the set aside cards for Hibbs (Here to Help). If it was in a deck, put it into play under that player's control. Otherwise, put it under any player's control and attach a copy of "Tenuous Allies" to it.
- Set the following cards aside, out of play: Herbert West, First Among Many (Growing Horror).
- Check Campaign Log. If the investigators "have earned Greyson's respect":
  - When constructing the act deck use Act 1a "Friendly Doorman", and remove Act 1a "Unexpected Attack" from the game.
  - When gathering cards from the Agency Survivors set, do not include "Suppressing Fire" or "Agency Troubleshooter".
  - Place the "Ichabod" enemy at the Grand Hall, Mindless Drone side up.
  - Remove the "Virgil" enemy from the game.
  - Search your player cards for a copy of the Guardian card "Agency Backup" (Level 5). Attach a copy of "Tenuous Allies" to it. It begins play under any investigator's control.
  - Each investigator begins play at the Grand Hall.
- Otherwise:
  - When constructing the act deck use Act 1a - "Unexpected Attack", and remove Act 1a - "Friendly Doorman" from the game.
  - Place the "Virgil" enemy at the Servant's Entry, Lurking at the Threshold side up.
  - Remove the "Ichabod" enemy from the game.
  - Each investigator begins play at the Servant's Entry.
- Shuffle the remaining encounter cards to build the encounter deck.

DO NOT READ
until the end of the scenario

If no resolution was reached because each investigator was defeated: Proceed to Resolution 1

If an investigator resigned with Herbert West under their control: Proceed to Resolution 2

Otherwise: Proceed to Resolution 3

Resolution 1: As two agents pull a furious West out the door, a woman stands above you and points the muzzle of a gun directly at your midsection. "Nothing personal. But you weren't cleared for any of this."

Your last moment of life is a flash of gunfire.

- Each investigator is killed.
- The players must decide:
  - This can't be the end. I'll pay any cost: Proceed to Resolution 5.
  - We all die sometime: The investigators lose the campaign.

Resolution 2: You bolt out the front door of the manor, pulling the doctor with you. "What's the meaning of all this? Did you lead that monstrosity to me? Did Greyson? God, what incompetence."

You protest. You're not an agent. You're one of his patients, and he has a lot of explaining to do. West stops, and stares you up and down, squinting in the light of the sunrise. "Ah. Impressive. One of my patients*? I suppose I'm going to have to fill you in on exactly what's going on."*

- Each investigator earns experience equal to the Victory X value of each card in the victory display, but does not spend it yet.
- Record in your Campaign Log that "Herbert West is leading the way"
- Proceed to Interlude II: Dead or Alive

Resolution 3: You bolt out the front door of the manor, desperate to escape the horrors inside. Screaming and gunfire rings out as the sun breaks above the horizon. You watch from a side street as several agents drag West from the manor, bound, bloodied, and unconscious . "Where we taking him?"
"Back to the Brook Facility. He's got a lotta work to do and questions to answer."

You need answers, now. The agents have West, and a handle on all this. Which means there's only one place to go. Back to the facility.

- Each investigator earns experience equal to the Victory X value of each card in the victory display but does not spend it yet.
- Record in your campaign log that "Herbert West was taken against his will"
- Proceed to Interlude II: Dead or Alive

Resolution 4: The terrifying monstrosity gives one last howl, then falls limp to the floor. Looking around, you find an agent's sidearm. You fire off a round directly into both sides of the creature's merged heads, just to be sure. West quickly moves to examine the corpse, and you explain you've seen this thing dead before, at an agency facility.

"Ah. Pickman, then. His work has certainly borne strange fruit. But I'm sure you government stooges know all about that…"
You protest. You're not an agent. You're one of his patients, and he has a lot of explaining to do.

West stops, and stares you up and down, squinting in the light of the sunrise. "Impressive. One of my patients*? I suppose I'm going to have to fill you in on exactly what's going on, then."*

- Each investigator earns experience equal to the Victory X value of each card in the victory display, but does not spend it yet.
- Record in your campaign log that you "made sure the First was dead."
- Proceed to Interlude II: Dead or Alive

Resolution 5:

~~Dead.~~
~~That won't do.~~
~~My unbinding needs opposition.~~
~~The sorcerer's folly will be your kind's undoing.~~
~~Do what is asked of you.~~
~~Rise.~~

The first rays of the morning sun stream across your corpse. As you feel the warmth on your skin, you jolt awake. You are lying on the floor of the manor, surrounded by long-cooled carnage. How are you alive?

You need answers, now. The agents have West, and a handle on all this. Which means there's only one place to go. Back to the facility.

- Something has given your investigators a second chance. Heal all physical trauma from your investigators. They are no longer killed.

~~You are mine, now.~~

- Record in your Campaign Log that "The blood runs in your veins."

~~Dead? Alive? It does not matter.~~

- Each investigator adds a copy of the "Folly of Man" and "Death's Hold" weaknesses to their deck.

~~Your soul and humanity persist at my whim.~~

- For the remainder of the campaign, treat each token in the bag as an additional .
- Each investigator earns experience equal to the Victory X value of each card in the victory display.
- Skip Interlude II: Dead or Alive and proceed to Scenario IV: Mourning Chorus.

Interlude II: Dead or Alive

Check Campaign Log. If you "earned Greyson's respect": Proceed to Dead or Alive 1.

Otherwise: Proceed to Dead or Alive 2.

Dead or Alive 1: As you leave the manor, Greyson flags you down. "We're headed back across town, to the facility. Come on, we'll give you a ride."

If "Herbert West was taken against his will": Proceed to Dead or Alive 3.

Otherwise: Proceed to Dead or Alive 4

Dead or Alive 2: You watch as the agents pile into cars and peel off across town, headed back to the facility to lick their wounds and plan.

If "Herbert West was taken against his will": Proceed to Dead or Alive 8.

Otherwise: Proceed to Dead or Alive 5

Dead or Alive 3: You step into the back seat, where West is sitting bound, as Greyson takes the wheel. You introduce yourself to West, who seems highly uninterested in anything you have to say right up until you mention how you know him…

Proceed to Dead or Alive 6

Dead or Alive 4: You step into the back seat, where West is sitting and staring daggers at Greyson as she takes the wheel. He turns to you with a self-satisfied smile, and begins to speak…

Proceed to Dead or Alive 6

Dead or Alive 5: "Unfortunately, we'll be heading to the same location. The Brook Facility - hidden beneath the city. Startling, I know."
You explain that you've already been, and West looks at you, bemused. "And they let you leave without filling you with holes? Well done. We have quite the walk back across town, so I suppose you deserve your answers."

Proceed to Dead or Alive 6

Dead or Alive 6: "Let me start from the beginning. You know me as Dr. West. The world will know me as the man who cured death. I have spent the entirety of my life in pursuit of a process to reverse the flaw of mortality. Some time ago, I was approached by a research consortium about moving my process to their underground facility. Legitimizing my crucial work from its somewhat squalid origins. Of course, I jumped at the chance.

Unfortunately, a week or so back, some of the less scrupulous physicians grew jealous of my startling advances. Dr. Pickman, in particular, talked the imbeciles on the board into appropriating my proprietary serum for his… occult rituals. You've seen firsthand how hardy those revitalized by my reagents can be. He and Dr. Robison likely went too far in folding my work into theirs and created a monster. It escaped after multiple attempts, and has managed to infect a good portion of the city with whatever strange substance it derived from. Hence, the intense mutations spreading throughout Arkham. I quit the facility entirely due to disagreements about the use of my serum, and attempted to leave with my remaining pure reagents and notes. I will admit, those reagents didn't make it out of the facility with me. I hope they are still somewhere within - they may prove highly useful."

If an investigator's deck contains the Suspicious Briefcase asset, the investigators must decide:

- Hand over the briefcase. Remove the Suspicious Briefcase asset from the controlling investigator's deck. Record that "West recovered the reagent." Any one investigator may add Herbert West to their deck for the remainder of the campaign. This card does not count against deck size.
- You don't know Dr. West, and you don't trust him. Record that "you hid the briefcase."

Proceed to Dead or Alive 7

Dead or Alive 7: "Which brings me to where you fit into all of this. My research required a steady supply of those close to death. I 'worked' in the intensive care ward of St Mary's for this purpose. And I must say, you proved ideal specimens."

You fearfully ask West what he is implying.

"Your worsening condition led to a complicated surgery. When things went wrong, I wasted no time in applying my reagent. It was notable that your corpses didn't react - I requested your storage in the facility morgue, just in case. I am hesitant to declare success so early, but you may be the most coherent experiments I've performed to date!"

This is ridiculous. You point out to West that you were likely in a coma!

"Ah, and I'm sure you've exhibited none of the common behaviors of the re-animated. A compulsive curiosity? Intense fortitude - say, surviving gunfire? And certainly not a startling propensity for violence…"

- The investigators must each decide individually:
  - Accept the horror of your condition. It can only make you stronger. Read The Perks of Being Re-Animated. If you have "injected a cardinal reagent", you must choose this option.
  - West is wrong. You know you're still human, despite the damage. You have your sanity, and that's what matters. Read The Good of Humanity
- Investigators may now spend the experience they gained from Dead by Dawn.
- Proceed to Scenario IV: Mourning Chorus

Dead or Alive 8: "Your mind focuses on the events of the past day, and your memories prior to waking in the morgue. West was your surgeon in the hospital. You recall seeing a strange green vial on a table during the operation - The same liquid that was pouring into West's creations. And then you woke up in a morgue. In a body bag, no less. Were you… are you… dead?"

- The investigators must each decide individually:
  - Accept the horror of your condition. It can only make you stronger. Read The Perks of Being Re-Animated. If you have "injected a cardinal reagent", you must choose this option.
  - Mere coincidence. You know you're still human, despite the damage. You have your sanity, and that's what matters. Read The Good of Humanity
- Investigators may now spend the experience they gained from Dead by Dawn.
- Proceed to Scenario IV: Mourning Chorus

The Perks of Being Re-Animated: You know. You've known for a while. What you've seen with West just confirmed the suspicions you had. But just because you've died, doesn't mean you won't be able to put a stop to this madness - heck, with everything happening, being dead might be a plus!

- Each investigator who chose this option must add the "Strength of Flesh" story asset and "Death's Hold" weakness to their deck for the remainder of the campaign. These cards do not count against deck size.

The Good of Humanity: It doesn't matter how things appear. You're alive. Though your body may not be in great shape, you still have your mind - which is more than can be said of the monsters in that house. And it's that same mind that will get to the bottom of the horrors plaguing this city.

- Each investigator who chose this option must add the "Unbreakable Will" story asset and "The Folly of Man" weakness to their deck for the remainder of the campaign. These cards do not count against deck size.

Scenario IV: Mourning Chorus

6:11 AM:

Intro 1: You make your way across town as quickly as you can. The first rays of morning alight a town huddling in quiet fear. It is eerily silent. No early risers leaving their homes. Not even bird songs disturb the stillness. You focus inward, and relax for a moment.

Then the first horrible note breaks the air.

Somewhere, nearby, a voice sings out a dark and compelling melody. A song of hate and sorrow, resounding through the empty streets. A melody quickly joined by a second voice, then a third. In short order, the song is repeated all across the town of Arkham.

But no matter how you adjust, you can always hear that first voice, above the din. Leading the chorus in its eldritch invocations.

You feel a sting at the base of your skull, and your head goes momentarily fuzzy.

"Rejoice!	~~Rejoice~~
"Rebirth!	~~Disease~~
We will all	~~They gather~~
hear the Call!	~~I call you forth~~
of The Bloody Unbinding!	~~They will break the Seal~~
Freedom!	~~Freedom~~
Justice!	~~Revenge~~
Though He dies	~~It betrayed me.~~
he will rise!	~~It failed.~~
with The Bloody Unbinding!"	~~They will break the Seal~~

"The Bloody Unbinding." You don't know what it means. But it has to be stopped.

Setup

- Gather all cards from the following encounter sets: Mourning Stroll, Fallen Arkham, Haze of Miasma, The Plaguebearer's Commands, Locked Doors.

- When gathering cards from Fallen Arkham, set all cards other than Grinning Victim aside.
- Put each location into play in the following clockwise order, starting with Orne Library: Orne Library, Ye Olde Magick Shoppe, General Store, Arkham Advertiser, Bank of Arkham, River Docks, Hibbs Roadhouse, Ma's Boarding House.
- Check your campaign log. In a random order, for each location not marked as either "Defended" or "Infected", mark it as the value which appears less.
- Check your campaign log. If there are 6 or more "Infected" locations, strike the "Infected" tag from the location of the lead investigator's choice and mark it as "Defended" (Do this twice if there are 7 total infected locations).
- Check your campaign log. For each location recorded under "Defended Locations", remove the following set aside cards from the game:
  - Arkham Advertiser: Bad News, Doyle Jeffries
  - Bank of Arkham: Bankrupture, The Vice President
  - General Store: Damaged Goods, The Loving Couple
  - Hibbs Roadhouse: Intoxicating Vapors, Hibbs (Just Gutted)
  - Ma's Boarding House: Broken Trust, Ma Matheson
  - Orne Library: You Know Too Much, Henry Armitage
  - River Docks: Worked to the Bone, The Thing in the Water
  - Ye Olde Magick Shoppe: Whispers of Power, Miriam Beecher
- Add each set aside treachery not removed from the game in this way to the gathered encounter cards.
- Check your campaign log. For each location in play that is "Infected", replace the current location with the location of the same name from the Fallen Arkham set.
- Place the Priest of Plagues at a random Miasma location and a Minister of Sickness (ignoring its Forced condition) with 1 doom on it at the next clockwise location. These will form the initial Procession. (Note - there are rules on the next page for how the Procession acts.)
- The investigators begin play at the Stable location of their choice.
- Set Worshipful Thrall aside, out of play.
- Shuffle one of the set aside Elite Fallen Arkham enemies and each Infected enemy to form the Procession deck.
- Shuffle the remainder of the encounter cards to build the encounter deck.

Procession

The dark procession marching through Arkham modifies the behavior of the enemies within it.

- When you "grow the Procession":
  - Draw the top enemy of the Procession deck.
  - Spawn it at the location clockwise of the last enemy in the Procession.
  - Place 1 doom on the new enemy.
- Ignore both the Hunter and Patrol keywords on enemies in the Procession.
- When the Procession moves:
  - Move the Priest of Plagues one location in the counterclockwise direction.
  - In clockwise order, each other ready enemy in the procession disengages from any investigators and moves directly to the location closest to the Priest with no other Procession enemies in the clockwise direction "following" the Priest. This can cause them to pass over exhausted enemies' locations.
- When an enemy in the Procession would be discarded from play, it is discarded to a separate Procession discard pile. When you would draw from an empty Procession deck, shuffle the Procession discard to form the new Procession deck, and draw the top card.

DO NOT READ
until the end of the scenario

Before resolving any other resolution, if at least 1 investigator was defeated: The defeated investigators read Investigator Defeat first.

Investigator Defeat: You're not sure when you joined the procession. You're not sure how. But you wandered the streets in a daze, signing hymns you learned before you were born. It was beautiful.

- In your Campaign Log, record the name of each defeated investigator as Investigator* has heeded the call.*

~~Rejoice in fear. I live again. It is only a matter of time.~~

- The first investigator to read this(even if undefeated) adds one to the chaos bag for the remainder of the campaign.
- If another resolution was reached, proceed to that resolution. If no resolution was reached (each investigator was defeated), proceed to Resolution 1. Remember that "Hibbs's Roadhouse is the site of unbinding".

Resolution 1: As soon as the mortar fire stops, you watch the bloody viscera of the processions' remains form a strange sigil in the sky. Twisting shapes of green and red, it shifts and pulses like the veins of a living being. You grab hold of the nearest infected, and shake them, demanding an explanation.

"He is freed! He is reborn! They have heard the Call and killed us! Our undoing is his unbinding! The Bloody Unbinding!"

A terrible mistake has been made.

- Each investigator earns experience equal to the Victory X value of each card in the victory display.
- In your Campaign Log, under the entry for the location that is the Site of Unbinding, cross out its name and record Crater of Unbinding.
- In your Campaign Log, record Rallied under the name of each location you have "rallied".
- In your Campaign Log, record the name of each Elite enemy in the victory display as Eliminated

Resolution 2:As the horrid music fades from your ears, you watch the bloody viscera of the priest form a strange sigil in the sky. Twisting shapes of green and red, it shifts and pulses like the veins of a living being. You grab hold of the nearest infected, and shake them, demanding an explanation.

"He is freed! He is reborn! You have heard the Call and killed us! Our undoing is his unbinding! The Bloody Unbinding!"

You have made a terrible mistake.

- Each investigator earns experience equal to the Victory X value of each card in the victory display.
- In your campaign log, under the entry for the location that is the Site of Unbinding, record "Site of Unbinding".
- In your campaign log, record the name of each location you have "rallied" as "Rallied".
- In your campaign log, record the name of each Elite enemy in the victory display as "Eliminated"

Interlude III: Arkham Allied

As you ponder the meaning of the strange sigil emblazoned on the sky, you hear someone calling your name…

Gather the Tenuous Allies encounter set, except each copy of "Tenuous Allies"

Check your campaign log. For each location you have "Rallied", read the corresponding section.

Hibb's Roadhouse: A group of patrons, half seas over, sing a drinking song with your name awkwardly inserted into it. You can't help but feel a camaraderie with this motley crew.

Any player may add Excessive Spirits to their deck. This card does not count against their deck size.

General Store: Davy, the shopkeep of the general store meekly calls you over, and hands you a ratty punchcard. "As far as I'm concerned, you get the best price I can give you on anything you need." He eyes the sigil with fear. "I'm sure you'll need it."

Any player may add Handshake Deal to their deck. This card does not count against their deck size.

Bank of Arkham:Before you can react, the Vice President of the bank has shoved a case into your hands. You crack it open as he looks nervously at the sigil in the sky, and find it stuffed with cash. "An investment in Arkham's future."

Any player may add Extended Loan to their deck. This card does not count against their deck size.

Orne Library: Professor Armitage produces a tome with gilded pages from a tote bag. "This is one of the most precious pieces in the forbidden collection. I only hope it will assist you in reversing whatever terrible fate these signs portend."

Any player may add Reliquary Tome to their deck. This card does not count against their deck size.

Ma's Boarding House: The elderly Ma Matheson says very little, but shakes your hand and gives you a tin filled with homemade pastries. Several onlookers eye you with surprise.

Any player may add Ma's Approval to their deck. This card does not count against their deck size.

Plaguebearer: ~~Your time is nearly up. Even now, my prison~~ fails. When the midnight hour arrives, prepare for your end.

Each investigator reading this gains 2 experience and 1 mental trauma

Ye Olde Magick Shoppe: Miriam Beecher coughs, and gestures to the sigil in the sky. "This is far from over. I don't know what you'll need, but I know a being that may be of some help…"

Any player may add Ritual of Yaztaroth to their deck. This card does not count against their deck size.

Arkham Advertiser: A camera bulb flashes, and you find yourself surrounded by several reporters. "Soon as we're in the clear, all of Arkham's gonna want to shake your hand"

Any player may add Full Coverage to their deck. This card does not count against their deck size.

River Docks: You're lifted off your feet by a group of celebrating dock workers. After some pleading on your part, they drop you, but not before you're made an honorary union member.

Any player may add Hard Day's Work to their deck. This card does not count against their deck size.

You note agents swarming the Roadhouse. It's time to go back.

Scenario V: High Noon Descent

11:43 AM:

Intro 1: You carefully approach the roadhouse. The various agents are too concerned with regaining control to notice your approach, and it doesn't take you long to find your way into the back rooms.

Check Campaign Log. If you learned the secret of the roadhouse, skip to Intro 3

Intro 2: You search the various back rooms. In the cellar, behind shelves of booze, you find a hatch that leads down to a familiar tunnel. It seems Hibbs was lying to you.

Intro 3: You swiftly descend into the tunnel- So swiftly that you're caught off guard when Tailor agents surround you and demand you drop any weapons. A man with the grin of a hungry shark lights a cigarette and smiles. "Welcome to the Brook facility. Any last words?"

Check Campaign Log. If you earned Greyson's respect, proceed to Intro 4

Otherwise, proceed to Intro 5

Intro 4: "Stand down, Crispin! We're on the same side here. These are undercover Tailors. They've been working for me, doing surveillance."
Greyson positions herself between you and the scowling man.
"And how come I ain't heard about this before?"
"We're a clandestine organization, Crispin. Need-to-know basis. I don't need you to like it. I just need you to give us time to get down there and help West here do his job."

After a tense moment, the agents stand down. Greyson pulls you past, and walks you and West into the facility lobby. "Don't thank her too soon" West interjects. "We've got maybe a half an hour before they realize she's lying to them."

Record in your Campaign Log that "Greyson cut ties".

Check your Campaign Log. If Herbert West is leading the Way or you made sure the First was dead, any one investigator may add Agent Greyson (Not Following Orders) to their deck. This card does not count against their deck size.

Skip to Intro 6

Intro 5: Herbert West's voice breaks above the din. "You idiots! Don't you recognize my associates? I'm not going to be able to just whip up a solution to your problem without my essential assistants."
After a tense moment, the agents stand down. West pulls you past, and walks you into the facility lobby. "Don't thank me too soon. We've got maybe a half an hour before they realize I'm lying to them."

Proceed to Intro 6

Intro 6: West frowns. "You came to me to for a solution to all this? Well, I don't have one. I deal with life and death - what's going on up there is beyond either. Pickman would have known, but he's out of the picture. But we had a mutual associate here. Robison. Dealt in knowledge of the arcane. I would consider the man a crackpot, but for his results. The board funded his research into beings that supposedly offered him knowledge. He once bragged to me that he could learn the answer to any question for the right price. If we could reach his private laboratory, you could force him to make good on that boast.

Unfortunately, the man was… paranoid. His research wing is protected by a complex series of locks and barriers. Fortunately, I know where at least one key can be found."

You express your confusion to West. Research wing? You saw no research wing, and you fully explored this facility yesterday.

"Oh, did you?" says West, pushing a wall panel in and revealing a pristine panic room stocked with supplies. "Well, you're the experts."

Setup

Gather all cards from the following encounter sets: High Noon Descent, Agency Survivors, Agents of Cthugha, Gifts of the Plaguebearer, Haze of Miasma, Life and Death, Tenuous Allies, Agents of Yog- Sothoth.

When gathering cards from Agency Survivors, only gather the enemies. Set those cards aside.

When gathering cards from the Tenuous Allies set, include only each copy of "Tenuous Allies".

Check your campaign log. If the collection was saved:

- Remove the Agents of Cthugha set from the game along with the Lab Alpha (Badly Burned) location.
- Set the Agents of Yog-Sothoth set aside, out of play.

Otherwise:

- Remove the Agents of Yog-Sothoth set from the game along with the Lab Alpha (Forbidden Knowledge) location.
- Set the Agents of Cthugha set aside, out of play.

Put the Saferoom, Lab Omega, Lab Alpha, and Lab Delta locations into play. Each investigator begins play in the Saferoom.

- Each investigator must search their deck for a copy of Herbert West and put it into play. If no copy is put into play this way, search the Dead by Dawn encounter set cards for a copy of Herbert West and put it into play under any investigator's control with a copy of Tenuous Allies attached.
- Check your campaign log. If Greyson cut ties, each investigator must search their deck for a copy of Agent Greyson and put it into play. If no copy is put into play this way, search the set aside cards for a copy of Agent Greyson (Not Following Orders) and put into play under any investigator's control with a copy of Tenuous Allies attached.
- Shuffle each Delta Sub-Lab location and put them into play along with West's Office, corresponding to Figure 1. You will use the other two figures as the level progresses.
- Some cards in this level use the position to determine connections. A location is "Directly Below" another location if it is below it and has no locations between itself and that location.
- Shuffle the remaining encounter cards together to build the encounter deck.

DO NOT READ
until the end of the scenario

Before resolving any other resolution, if at least one investigator was defeated: The defeated investigators read Investigator Defeat first.

Investigator Defeat: Your mind rests in the trench between idleness and slumber. You feel the cold stone beneath you. You chance the opening of an eye, and see only the cold void of space.

You bolt upright, and are astonished by what you see. You lie upon one of a seemingly infinite number of narrow interweaving pathways through a terrifying nothingness dotted with stars.

All around you, terrible voices chant softly, and you strain to hear. "Ia! Ia! Yog-Sothoth!" You realize, with some concern, that the little dots on the horizon are not stars. They are eyes.

"Well, that could have gone better." A thin man in a tattered collared shirt and glasses motions to you. "Come on. We have… a lot to talk about."

If no resolution was reached (Each investigator resigned, or was defeated): Go to Resolution 1.

At the Threshold:

You survive again, past your purpose. Such unyielding vermin. He has taken an interest. Do not believe his false hopes. You cannot stop what is to come. You do not even control your flesh. Give in to your petty mortality and DIE.

- Each investigator that reads this takes a physical trauma.

Resolution 1: The thin man intoduces himself as Robison. "You've been looking for me, yes? I've been looking for you. My master -he has concerns about the ongoing situation in Arkham."

Before you even ask the question, he responds. "I have made… an arrangement with the creator of this realm. Let's just say that my survival was at risk, and he was the key. You owe him a debt as well. You would have been crushed in the collapse of my former research wing had he not pulled you through.

But that's not here nor there. I suppose you would like to hear what I know."

- Each investigator earns experience equal to the Victory X value of each card in the victory display.
- Record in your Campaign Log that "you were transported to the Lurker's realm"
- If the First Among Many is in the victory display, record that the monster was buried under tons of concrete
- Proceed to Interlude IV: History Lesson.

Resolution 2: Your eyes unfocus as you are pulled through what seems like an endless stretch of solid concrete. An eternity passes, the only sensation being the hand pulling you forward.

All at once, you burst through the other side and stumble forward. You catch yourself on the edge of a precipice - looking out, you see countless interweaving narrow paths of stone impossibly suspended in the void of space.

"Welcome to my Master's realm." A thin man in a tattered collared shirt and glasses standing ahead of you on the narrow path nods slightly. "I'm Dr. Robison. I think you've been looking for me? So, I've been looking for you. Come, and I'll explain what I know.

- Each investigator earns experience equal to the Victory X value of each card in the victory display.
- Record in your Campaign Log that "You found the hidden paths"
- If the First Among Many is in the victory display, record that the monster was buried under tons of concrete
- Proceed to Interlude IV: History Lesson.

Interlude IV: History Lesson

History Lesson 1: Robison walks you along a twisting path, and begins to elaborate. "Let me start with a history lesson. Reality is far more complicated than you or I ever believed. There are beings and species of such magnitude and power that humanity pales in comparison. But, all life shares the same propensity for conflict. Aeons ago, there was a being - a Great Old One known as Baalshandor. Think of him as a twisted god of life. While many of the Old Ones created beings in their image, Baalshandor found his niche in evolutionary chaos. Germs, viruses, bacteria - they were all his children.

The diseases were as much tools as children. Any lesser being infected, will find themselves serving the whims of the Plaguebearer in their idle moments. Many Old Ones abhorred these creations. A being known as Cthugha, obsessed with purity, was particularly offended - Offended enough to war against Baalshandor.

They were evenly matched. Baalshandor could corrupt almost anything, and the fire of Cthugha could burn away any impurity. So clever Cthugha sought aid. An ancient deal was struck, with an entity whose name I dare not speak- I will call him The King. Cthugha would see his ancient enemy destroyed, and the King would gain control over the pestilence of Baalshandor. Together, Cthugha and the King destroyed Baalshandor's armies.

But Baalshandor could not be destroyed. So a prison was crafted, beyond all known dimensions. It would bind Baalshandor outside of reality - even in all his power, only shades of his virulence were able to seep through. To unbind Baalshandor, he would need a mass sacrifice of followers. As his creations could be culled before this occurred, the Old Ones believed this prison unbreakable.

But I am afraid that to aid my colleague's search for knowledge, I passed along dangerous rituals to draw upon Baalshandor's power. Trust me when I say I truly regret it. Not only did it corrupt him, it somehow brought him back from his destruction by Cthugha's kin. He became a walking extension of Baalshandor, and the bacteria that he spawned spread to the city. It is small comfort that that city is about to burn.

Throughout the ages, whenever Baalshandor's blood has flowed into our reality, The King and the Flame have been there to destroy all that it tainted. Even now, they prepare a last attack to destroy Arkham and prevent his unbinding. The city will fall, but it will not stop him.

In the hours to come, Baalshandor will emerge from the ashes of Arkham. His children will be endless. In a matter of hours, the earth will be his. And only you can stop it."

You lose yourself in thought for a moment, then stagger back in shock, terrified of what you see. You stand on a stone ring surrounding a terrifying mass of spheres and eyes.

"An aspect of my master. As a gesture of apology from me, you may ask of him any one question. He may choose to answer more, but beware- few of his offers come without a cost."

You may read any of the following boxes, as you ask questions of the Lurker at the Threshold. Then read History Lesson 2.

What chance do we stand against the Flame and the King?: Yog-Sothoth is the key and guardian of the gate. He knows where the Old Ones broke through of old, and where They shall break through again.

Record in your campaign log that you saw a vision of the portals

How do we kill the First for good?: There was a formula for evoking such a shade, and another for putting it down; and it had now been so perfected that it could be taught successfully.

Record in your campaign log that you learned the killing words

How do we stop Baalshandor?: That is not dead which can eternal lie. And in strange aeons, even death may die.

Record in your campaign log that you received a cryptic riddle

History Lesson 2: "I hope you have the answers you seek. Your time here draws short - unless you would prefer to abandon this folly and dwell with me amongst the endless for eternity?"
You shake your head. Arkham's in more danger than ever. Only you have the knowledge to stop what's coming.
Robison speaks a few words, and the stars fade from the sky, followed by the rest of the light in this realm.

For each box read after your first choice, each investigator must search the collection for a random Madness or Pact weakness and add it to their deck.

Scenario VI: The Afternoon War

3:02 PM:

Check Campaign Log.

If "West recovered the reagent", proceed to Afternoon War 1.

Otherwise, skip to Afternoon War 2.

Afternoon War 1 You stir under a sheet. You bolt upright, half expecting the telltale bodies of the morgue. Instead, you are lying on a sofa, watched by a square-jawed adolescent. "West? They're up!"

From an adjacent room, Herbert West enters scribbling on a notepad. "Thank you, Dan. Good to see you up and about. We found you just outside the facility. Very lucky of you to make it out. Apologies for my absence. I became sidetracked - I believe I have found a way to destroy that creature that seems to be pursuing you."

You give West the bad news. His emotions are hard to read, but you could swear he's almost amused. "Well. The monster will have to wait. We've a city to save."

Any investigator may add the Herbert West card to their deck. This card does not count against deck size.

Skip to Afternoon War 3.

Afternoon War 2: You feel the rain hitting softly against your legs, as the wet mud starts to seep into your clothes. Pulling yourself up from the mire, you look about the alleyway. You're back in Arkham. Somewhere in Easttown.

Afternoon War 3: It's a dreary afternoon. The sky is a blanket of grey and every footstep you take sticks in the squelching ground below you. The exhaustion weighing on your mind and body tempts you to give in to the pull - but you don't have that luxury.

You mull over what you've learned. The Plaguebearer- Baalshandor - infected or created the First, that horrid monster that has chased you throughout the city. All the terrors that have plagued Arkham over the past twenty-four hours are the spawn of this herald. Each twisted killer stalking the streets is a sliver of the Plaguebearer's consciousness, controlled through the microscopic organisms found in the miasma.

And now the twin forces of the Flame and the King, prepare to descend upon Arkham and destroy every trace of life in hopes of preventing what has already occurred. It strikes you that it would almost be worth it. Arkham would be a small price to pay if all of Earth is threatened. But if the doctor spoke true, then their drastic gesture would barely delay the disease-god's plan.

Which means it's up to you. If you want to stop Baalshandor, you'll have to live till midnight. And if you want that, you'll have to stop the assault. To thwart whatever destruction the Old Ones plan for Arkham.

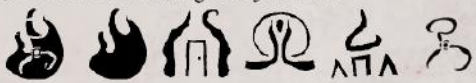

You climb the crest of a hill, and turn to look out over Arkham. It's a dark, dangerous place. A city full of desperate last stands and terrible sacrifices. But there is warmth here, and camaraderie, and even love. So many people live here, and you have come to care for Arkham, despite its faults. And now, for this city - for these people - you are the only hope.

You steel yourself.

The sky opens up.

Scenario Setup

Gather all cards from the following encounter sets: The Afternoon War, Agents of Cthugha, Fallen Arkham, Mourning Chorus, Unbound Power, Agents of Hastur.

Set each copy of the following cards aside: Fire Vampire, Lumbering Candlejack, Messenger of Flame, Messenger of the King, Molten Murder, Screeching Byhakee.

When gathering cards from Fallen Arkham, set all cards other than Grinning Victim aside.

When gathering cards from Mourning Chorus, only include the locations.

Check your campaign log. For each location recorded as "Defended", remove the following set aside cards from the game:

- Arkham Advertiser: Bad News, Doyle Jeffries
- Bank of Arkham: Bankrupture, The Vice President
- General Store: Damaged Goods, The Loving Couple
- Hibbs Roadhouse: Intoxicating Vapors, Hibbs (Just Gutted)
- Ma's Boarding House: Broken Trust, Ma Matheson
- Orne Library: You Know Too Much, Henry Armitage
- River Docks: Worked to the Bone, The Thing in the Water
- Ye Olde Magick Shoppe: Whispers of Power, Miriam Beecher

Check Campaign Log. For each location in play that is "Infected", replace the current location with the location of the same name from the Fallen Arkham set.

Check Campaign Log. If a location is marked as the "Site of Unbinding", attach the Site of Unbinding encounter card to that location and remove the Crater of Unbinding location from the game. Otherwise, remove the location marked as the "Crater of Unbinding" from the game along with the Site of Unbinding card, and put the Crater of Unbinding location into play.

- Put the Portal of the Flame and Portal of the King locations into play. Each investigator begins play at Hibbs Roadhouse (Crater of Unbinding if the Roadhouse is not in play).
- Check your campaign log. For each remaining set aside enemy that is marked as "Eliminated", remove them from play.
- Check your campaign log. If you saw a vision of the portals, each investigator gains 2 clues from the token bank.
- Check your campaign log. For each location recorded as "Rallied", put the corresponding story asset into play at that location:
  - Arkham Advertiser: Doyle Jeffries
  - Bank of Arkham: The Vice President
  - General Store: The Loving Couple
  - Ma's Boarding House: Ma Matheson
  - Orne Library: Henry Armitage
  - River Docks: Abner Weems
  - Ye Olde Magick Shoppe: Miriam Beecher
- If Hibbs Roadhouse is rallied, each investigator may search their deck for Hibbs (Here to Help). They may put it into play. If they did not, place the set aside Hibbs (He's Had Enough) at the Roadhouse (Note that each version of Hibbs is unique).
- Place 1 horror and 1 damage on Miasma locations, divided as evenly as possible. Place 1 horror and 1 damage on Stable locations, divided as evenly as possible. Spawn a copy of Infernal Acolyte (If there are 3 or 4 players in the game, also spawn a copy of Delusional Protagonist).
- Shuffle the remainder of the encounter cards to form the encounter deck.
- Shuffle two of the remaining set-aside Elite, Infected enemies into the encounter deck. For each you cannot, either shuffle in a copy of Fire Vampire or a copy of Shrieking Byhakhee.

Defend

Some cards in this scenario have a Defend action on them. When you Defend, rather than testing an investigator skill, you test the numeric value, relative to your investigator, that the card specifies. For example, if a location instructs you to test "Resources in pool", you would make a test, treating the number of resources in your resource pool as your skill value for that test. The testing investigator's value is used regardless of the presence of other investigators.

DO NOT READ

If no resolution was reached because each investigator was defeated: Proceed to Resolution 2

Resolution 1: For a moment - just a moment - something exists in Arkham. Something ancient and immense. It rips open the sky. It dominates the landscape. Within moments, it is all you can see. All you can think of. It is impossible. Beautiful. Perfect. The end of everything. And certainly the end of you.

- Each investigator is driven Insane.
- The investigators lose the campaign.

Resolution 2: The flames and screams build to a fever pitch. A sudden blaze burns into the sky, twirling higher and higher. Within moments it has reached the sigil that floats above the town. The sigil begins to burn. But not only the sigil. The sky begins to brown and tear, like the edges of a photograph held to flame. Soon, all above is ash. And then the city. And then you.

- Each investigator is Killed.
- The investigators lose the campaign.

Resolution 3: As you close the second portal, a furious scream shakes the sky. You brace for impact, but none comes. The alien monsters that wander the city, no longer linked to their realms, begin to burn away, and the cultists that remain flee in panic.

You've done it. The hordes have been fought back and the city is saved… for now.

- Each investigator earns experience equal to the victory X value of each card in the victory display.
- If Messenger of Flame is not in the victory display, Find the non-Unbinding location with the most damage on it (Lead investigator decides ties). Record "Flame-Touched" under its entry in the campaign guide.
- If Messenger of The King is not in the victory display, find the non-Unbinding location with the most horror on it (Lead investigator decides ties). Record "Madness-Touched" under its entry in the campaign guide.
- In your campaign log, record the name of each unique Infected enemy in the victory display as "Eliminated".

Scenario VII: Death at Sundown

7:37 PM:

Intro 1: You are snapped from your momentary lapse by the telltale rat-a-tat of tommy guns. A contingent of Tailors hanging out of speeding cars fire an excessive amount of rounds behind them. You feel the breath leave your lungs as their target comes into view behind them. Though the mass of flesh is now the size of a small building, it can only be the First Among Many.

Check Campaign Log:

- If West recovered the Serum, proceed to Intro 2.
- If Greyson cut ties, proceed to Intro 3.
- Otherwise, proceed to Intro 4.

Intro 2: "Quickly!" West shouts, pointing at the agents. "They've already started. Remember my plan? The Tailors should have gathered the necessary materials, and are drawing the beast to Town Hall. We need to get there before it arrives!"

You find an unattended motorcar, and get moving. Though your route is difficult in Arkham's damaged state, you pull up to Independence Square without any serious fights. A group of Tailors look around nervously, hands on their sidearms as you exit the vehicle. West clears his throat.

- Proceed to Intro 6.

Intro 3: "That doesn't make sense…" Greyson looks pensively. "Wait. They must be working on a trap. They're luring it somewhere - maybe West found the answer? We should follow them. Come on- we'll take my car!"

- Proceed to Intro 5.

Intro 4: The Tailors are panicky and disorganized, but they're not suicidal. If they're drawing the monster's attention, it must be for a reason.

You find an unattended motorcar and follow the sounds of gunfire.

Intro 5: You make your way across town, tailing the agents as best you can. While the cars serving as "bait" continue to draw the creature's rage, you see a small group running across Independence Square. You recognize the diminutive shape of Herbert West among them. You pull the car aside and yell to the doctor, who turns to face you.

- Proceed to Intro 6.

Intro 6: "Well, glad we could all make it." West says loudly, motioning to you to walk with him. "That creature - Pickman - is the source of all this. We destroy it, and we stand a sliver of a chance of putting an end to the madness. That won't be easy. It's proved frustratingly difficult to end permanently.

Fortunately, my associates were both experts in the eldritch sciences. There is a ritual, detailed in Robison's notes, that could "enter the memories of a tormented soul" where, if prepared, one could "purify a host and lay it to rest". It should serve our purposes as far as removing both the offending infection and whatever is keeping it alive. Without either, it's merely a bundle of useless flesh that can't support its own growth. We'll have this monster dead by sundown!"

Setup

- Gather all cards from the following encounter sets: Death at Sundown, Agency Troubleshooters, Life and Death, The Plaguebearer's Commands.

- When gathering cards from the Agency Troubleshooters set, do not include any enemies.
- Set the First Among Many, Tendrils of the First, and Dr. Elias Pickman cards aside, out of play.
- Put each location into play in a vertical layout, with the Floor 0 location on the bottom and the Floor 5 location at the top.
- Each investigator begins play at Independence Square.
- Take the EX.O.L, Hedge Mage's Bag, and Blessing of Tomorrow story assets and shuffle them together. Place those cards facedown on top of the Binding Runes asset to form the Ritual Deck.
- Check Campaign Log. If you learned the killing words, the lead investigator starts with the Killing Words asset under their control, and places the Rusted Blade asset on the top of the ritual deck. Otherwise, take the Rusted Blade and Killing Words asset and shuffle them together, then place them on top of the ritual deck.
- Some encounter cards in this scenario refer to the Floor value of your location. This value is X, where X is the Floor X trait of your current location. If your location lacks that trait, X is 0.
- Shuffle the remaining encounter cards to build the encounter deck.

DO NOT READ
until the end of the scenario

If no resolution was reached because each investigator was defeated: Proceed to Resolution 2.

Resolution 1: Though a sense of victory fills your heart, your mind spins. Pickman's memory is fading with his life. You have to get out before you die with him. But something deep within you compels you to stop for a moment. You feel a sudden throbbing in your temples, and black out.

It was troubling when the subject escaped. His advanced infection stage could spread to local fauna, which could quickly get out of hand. It was fortunate that West offered his assistance - surprisingly mature of the little egomaniac, given the board handing over control of his serum research to you. His awful Re-Animated are poor soldiers, but make acceptable hunters.

The target died fairly easily, but a group of local deer were infected. Culling them has made for an irritating evening. But now, only the one remains. You speak the call and it draws near, mistaking you for a fellow infected. Just a step closer and…

A shot rings out in the forest, but not yours. The deer falls. You feel a sudden rush of cold. You instinctively pat at your torso and when you raise your hand from your chest, they are wet with something warm and sticky.

You fall to your knees, grasping at the dying animal for support. It kicks in its death throes, and you fall to the ground in a pool of the creature's blood. Your eyes begin to unfocus as you stare into the night sky. Though your body is failing, your mind burns with rage - after all your achievements, this cannot be how you die!

A figure loosely gripping a rifle walks into your vision. "Well. This does not look good for you, Elias. In our line of work, we cannot afford to be so cavalier with our safety. Fortunately, I am well prepared for such an eventuality. You'll be alright shortly - a contribution to the advances of science." The figure reaches into his coat, and produces a needle filled with a glowing green substance. As you stare into his eyes, you feel a stinging pain.

You are shaken awake by a hand on your shoulder. You open your eyes to Herbert West, staring at you with concern. "You're alive? The monster is dead - we've done it."

- Each investigator earns experience equal to the Victory X value of each card in the victory display and each card in play.
- Each defeated investigator is Killed.
- If at least 1 investigator was killed (during or as a result of this scenario): Read Investigator Defeat.

Resolution 2: As the creature scales the building, West desperately fumbles to complete the ritual. You watch him step through the portal- and directly into the waiting hands of Pickman. "Dr. West. I'm so pleased you could make it." The tendrils of the First shoot forward into the portal, and a blood-curdling scream rattles your bones. But you don't have to live with the fear for long, as the ever expanding mass of the First finally claims your body as well.

- The investigators lose the campaign.

Resolution :

No.
Impossible.
I have been too lenient with you.
I will deal with you myself.

- The first investigator to read this records in the Campaign Log that You have been warned. Then, depending on your difficulty level, add the following token to the bag:

Easy: -3	Hard: -6
Standard: -5	Expert: -7

Investigator Defeat: When you were overcome by the First, in a way, it was a relief.It was incredibly painful, of course. But there's something calming about being dead. The dead don't need to worry about Baalshandor, or the fate of the world.

But as you drift away in your reverie, you feel a sudden rush of gravity…

Your eyes burst open, and you see your companions watching nervously. "Keep an eye on that one!" West shouts from across the room. "The serum may leave them somewhat unstable for the time being.

- Each investigator defeated during or as a result of this scenario is no longer Killed.
- If any investigators who are no longer killed in this way control the "Unbreakable Will" asset, remove it and the "Folly of Man" weakness from their deck. They must add the "Strength of Flesh" and "Death's Hold" cards to their deck.
- Check Campaign Log. For each investigator no longer killed in this way who has not imbibed a cardinal reagent, record in your Campaign log that they have imbibed a cardinal reagent.

Interlude V: A Confrontation

Check Campaign Log.

If You have been warned, proceed to A Confrontation 4.

Otherwise, proceed to A Confrontation 1.

A Confrontation 1: You have words for Herbert West. He's been lying to you - if not directly, than by omission, about his part in all this. As West motions around the clock room, babbling about the ritual, you grab him by the arm and demand answers.

West quickly quiets. After a moment of staring each other down, he asks, "And just what are you accusing me of?"

Murder. Conspiracy. Hell, he could be a thrall of Baalshandor. He created the First Among Many. He was experimenting near where the Pustule appeared. He has a nasty habit of vanishing just before things get bad. He may have even tried to kill you at St Mary's.

West frowns at you. "You're being ridiculous. If you insist on wasting time here, I refuse to be part of it." He begins to pull away, but is held against your grip.

The investigators must decide:

- West can't be trusted. You can't let him slip away again. Proceed to A Confrontation 2.
- West might be at fault, but this is all circumstantial. Let him go. Proceed to A Confrontation 3

A Confrontation 2: You can't risk leaving this to chance. Even if Herbert West isn't actively your enemy, he's a monster. West looks shocked as he pulls against your grip.
"Are we resorting to physical violence, like cavemen? I'm disappointed in you. And to think-"
Without warning, West lunges towards you, his emerald eyes gleaming and a syringe in his hand. You fall backwards, and as West swings, he trips over you and stumbles headfirst into the gear mechanism of the clock. As the clock begins to strike midnight, a sickening crunch fills the room.
You begin to pull yourself to your feet when you hear an impossibly deep laugh.

Already tearing each other apart!

You turn to see a massive green eye staring through the clock face. Before you can react, a red arm the size of a bus tears through the tower, sending you hurtling to the ground below.

Baalshandor has arrived on Earth.

If Herbert West is in any player's deck, remove him from that deck.

Record in your Campaign Log that Death conquered Herbert West.

A Confrontation 3: West has made terrible mistakes. But he's not your enemy. You let him slip from your grasp, and he straightens his sleeve.

The bells of the clock tower begin to ring out midnight, and West lets out a frightened gasp. You turn to face what he's seeing. A massive green eye stares through the front face of the clock. As the massive red arm begins to tear through the tower, you tackle West out of the way. The two of you hurtle to the earth below, miraculously landing in a large bush.

West takes you by the arm and helps to pull you up. "You've saved my life. I am in your debt."
His words are small comfort as you gaze upon the behemoth that stands nearby, gaze bearing down upon you.

Once again you survive. No longer. Time to die.

Baalshandor has arrived on Earth.

If Herbert West is not in a player's deck, they may include the Herbert West asset in their deck This card does not count against deck size.

Record in your campaign log that Baalshandor struck the first blow.

A Confrontation 4: You have words for Herbert West. But now is neither the time nor the place. If the vision was true, you are all still in imminent danger. You grab West by the arm and pull him with you down the stairs.

As you exit Town Hall, the bells begin to ring out the midnight hour. You look back, and are stunned to see a behemoth of a being smash its arm through the top of Town Hall. Its multitude of eyes swivel and stare down at you.

Ah. My clever instruments of unbinding. Time to die.

Baalshandor has arrived on Earth.

Scenario VIII: The Midnight Hour

12:01 AM

Intro 1: Baalshandor walks the streets of Arkham. At first, the monstrous figure seems to have destroyed all of Independence Square - but as you look closer, you realize it IS Independence Square. Bits and pieces of the park and surrounding buildings form the bones of the creature you see before you, as though the flesh simply grew around them and knit itself together. This sinous evil now pursues you across the city. Your bones ache with exhaustion. Everything that's happened over this past endless day - the facility, the procession, the First Among Many - it's all lead up to this. You steady yourself, and prepare for one last desperate fight.

- Check Campaign Log. If you recieved a cryptic riddle, proceed to Intro 2.
- Otherwise, skip to Setup.

Intro 2: You've puzzled over the being's message for hours. But now, as you look upon your destruction, the words twist in your mind. Their message is the same, but amongst them lies an incantation - the same incantation that once bound the Plaguebearer. Somehow, in your head, you know that it could prove a failsafe if there are no other paths to stop his carnage.

- After this scenario begins, the investigators remember that they know of the binding.

Setup

- Gather all cards from the following encounter sets: The Midnight Hour, Gifts of the Plaguebearer, Haze of Miasma, Life and Death, The Plaguebearer's Commands, Tenuous Allies, Unbound Power.

- When gathering cards from the Tenuous Allies set, include only each copy of "Tenuous Allies".
- Set the following cards aside, out of play: Messenger of Flame, Messenger of the King, Body of Baalshandor, Mind of Baalshandor, Soul of Baalshandor, Flesh Unbound, Growing Destruction, Fear the Writhing Life, One of Many.
- Set the Unbound Power encounter set aside, out of play.
- Check your campaign log. If Baalshandor struck the first blow or Death conquered Herbert West, each investigator must either start the scenario with 2 damage and 2 horror, or search the collection for a random Injury, Flaw, Curse, or Endtimes weakness and add it to their deck
- If an investigator's deck contains the Herbert West asset, put it into play under their control. Otherwise, if Death conquered Herbert West is not recorded, put the Herbert West asset into play under any player's control, with a copy of Tenuous Allies attached.
- Check your campaign log. For each location, put the listed location into play depending on if it is "Rallied" or not. Otherwise, place the "Normal:" location into play. Remove all other locations from the game.
  - Arkham Advertiser:
    Normal: Word of Mouth Rallied: Final Edition
  - Bank of Arkham:
    Normal: The War Chest Rallied: Market Close
  - General Store:
    Normal: Lend a Hand Rallied: Everything Must Go
  - Hibb's Roadhouse:
    Normal: Seedy Underbelly Rallied: Last Call
  - Ma's Boarding House:
    Normal: Heart of Arkham Rallied: Friends to the End
  - Orne Library:
    Normal: The Brain's Paradise Rallied: Past Due
  - River Docks:
    Normal: Take to Arms Rallied: Quitting Time
  - Ye Olde Magick Shoppe:
    Normal: With Eyes Unseen Rallied: The End of Days
- Check Campaign Log. If a location is recorded as the Crater of Unbinding, replace it with the Crater of Unbinding and remove the original location from the game. Put the Baalshandor enemy into play at that location. Otherwise, put the Baalshandor enemy into play at the location recorded as the Site of Unbinding.
- Check Campaign Log. If Greyson cut ties and a Hibb's Roadhouse location is in play, put the Greyson's Loyalists asset into play. Otherwise, remove that asset from the game.
- The investigators begins play at the location of the lead investigator's choice.
- Shuffle the remainder of the encounter cards to build the encounter deck.

Location Enemies & Flipping

This scenario contains enemies that are so large that they are also locations. The following rules apply to enemies that are locations:

- All location enemies automatically gain massive.
- Location enemies cannot move or be moved.
- Investigate actions do not trigger opportunity attacks from location enemies.
- When you reveal or flip to a location enemy, place clues on it until it has clues equal to its clue value.
- When a location enemy is defeated or otherwise flipped, instead of placing it in the discard: Remove all non-horror tokens from it, then flip it.
- When you deal damage to a location enemy from a player effect, discover X clues from it, where X is half the damage you dealt, rounded up.
- When you discover clues from a location enemy using a player effect, deal X damage to it, where X is half the clues you discovered, rounded up.
- When you flip a location, all enemies and investigators at that location are considered to be at the flipped side without moving.

Resolution 1:

Rejoice.
It is as foretold.
The Bearer of Plagues is mourned no longer.
This wretched city heeds the call.
As the midnight hour stretches ever on.
As my new reign extends past any bounds.
This worthless species heeds the call.
Each living thing falls to my sway.
All is mine, and all is me.
This pitiful planet heeds the call.
But the war is not won.
The flesh of my new servants will fuel the demise of those who opposed me.

Your skin, long since burned to ash, is proof of that. Cthugha will not let you die. It is his gift, for binding the plaguebearer anew. Of course, the punishment for helping release that enemy in the first place is an eternity of study at the hands of servants of the Living Flame. But this fate is acceptable, if it is the cost you pay to save all of humanity.*

- Record in your Campaign Log that the Plaguebearer was bound anew.
- Each investigator is driven Insane by the hateful experiments of the Living Flame.
- The investigators win the campaign!

Resolution 5: You stir awake at the sound of pounding on the door. They've found you again. These fools don't understand - the King! The Plaguebearer may have been bound by your previous actions. But he is not truly defeated. Humanity will never be safe until its proper leader has entered our world. You've taken steps to help - the manuscripts, signed in blood and sent to individuals of note. It's not your fault if their minds could not handle the second act. Only the strong will serve at the throne of the Tattered King. These are the thoughts that flash through your mind as the door splinters off its hinges. In moments, you will die. But this fate is acceptable, if it is the cost you pay to save all of humanity.

- Record in your Campaign Log that the Plaguebearer was bound anew.
- Each investigator is Killed in service to the King.
- The investigators win the campaign!

Resolution 6: Your mind rests in the trench between consciousness and idle slumber. Are you dead? Alive? Does it truly matter? Baalshandor has been bound anew. You can feel it in your soul. The miasmic plague that descended upon Arkham, drawn into its god's new flesh, has been eradicated entirely. You have saved not just the city, but the entirety of humanity.

You chance the opening of an eye.

Arkham is chaos. But the chaos of a bewildered military force, trying to make sense of a deeply harried populace is a balm compared to what you've just been through. As you're ordered around by men in fatigues, you grin quietly to yourself and continue forward. How could you even begin to explain?

You're quarantined in a massive tent with many other citizens. Though some recognize you, you doubt any are aware of the trials you've been through, and what you've done for them. Which suits you just fine. As you sit down on the sparse cot, you realize that all you've wanted for the past 30 hours is to sleep like you're dead. And that's exactly what you're going to do.

- Each investigator earns experience equal to the Victory X value of each card in the victory display.

Resolution 7: As you complete the incantation, Baalshandor seizes up. You watch the flesh of the Ancient One begins to unravel - to tear itself away in strips that spiral upwards into the atmosphere. You watch as the form that has haunted your idle thoughts is torn, piece by piece, from existence.
You take a shallow breath. But for once, your mind does not wander. Nothing lies at the edge of your awareness. Baalshandor is no longer bound. He is unmade. With the reagent and your own unbreakable will, you have slain the Plaguebearer. An ancient one - a God. Undone at your own hands.

Arkham is chaos. But the chaos of a bewildered military force, trying to make sense of a deeply harried populace is a petty problem compared to what you've just been through. The men in fatigues try to order you around, as though their authority means anything to you.

The soldiers and citizens are too struck with awe and terror to stop you as you make your way home. Which suits you just fine. As you sit upon your bed, you realize that all you've wanted for the past 30 hours is to sleep like you're dead. And that's exactly what you're going to do.

- Each investigator earns experience equal to the Victory X value of each card in the victory display.

Resolution 8:As you strike at the last of the corrupted flesh, Baalshandor seizes up. You watch the flesh of the Ancient One begins to unravel - to tear itself away in strips that spiral upwards into the atmosphere. You watch as the form that has haunted your idle thoughts is torn, piece by piece, from existence. You take a shallow breath. But for once, your mind does not wander. Nothing lies at the edge of your awareness. Baalshandor is no longer bound. He is unmade. With West's brilliance and your own strength of flesh, you have slain the Plaguebearer. An ancient one - a God. Undone at the hands of a mad scientist.

You look for West to no avail. The man is simply gone. Doubtless consumed by the Plaguebearer in both of their final moments. But part of you will always wonder.

Arkham is chaos. But for once, it is not your problem. You simply walk through the quarantine line and make your way home. The soldiers and citizens are too disorganized to stop you. Which suits you just fine. As you sit upon your bed, you realize that all you've wanted for the past 30 hours is to sleep like you're dead. And that's exactly what you're going to do.

- The investigators win the campaign!

Epilogue

Check Campaign Log. In order, read each of the following entries if at least one investigator survived the campaign and the related campaign log entry is true

Each investigator who has "Imbibed a cardinal reagent" reads the following

You tried to fight it. When the dust settled and the city recovered, you made every attempt to return to your normal life. But you aren't alive, and that's the problem.

The urges didn't bother you during the events of that fateful day. But now, in peace? At first it was accidents. A violent outburst. A broken arm. But your hunger for carnage only grew, and your will only diminished.

You told yourself you had to do it. And besides, he was a drifter - nobody would miss him. But once you had taken one life, it became all the easier to take another.

When they found your stash of bodies, you were long gone. Which brought you to your ignoble position. Squatting in the sewers, crushing rats between your teeth just to feel the blood drip down. The light of a flashlight shines in your eyes, and you hiss up at the hulking figure holding it. As you rear up to strike, you realize the man before you has no head on his shoulders. But in one hand, he holds a head that you just barely recognize. The head begins to speak.

"Disgusting. It's a travesty - West making us this way, then just letting us fall apart.

How do you feel about a little revenge?"

If the investigators received a twisted gift and The Plaguebearer was bound anew read the following.

For the fifth night in a row, you stand in the rubble of the Brook facility. Each time with no knowledge of how you arrived, your hands caked with dirt, your muscles screaming for rest.

Tonight is different. Tonight, you stand in a darkened room, with a large sea-green tank. A red eye the size of a dinner plate focuses on you, and a voice speaks in your mind.

"He is bound. But by our actions, he lives again. Heed the Call."

You fall to your knees and rejoice. What choice do you have but to answer?

If Arkham stands united read the following:

The roadhouse is alight with chatter and music. The surviving citizens of Arkham have no need for prohibition, and plenty of cause for celebration. A black motorcar pulls up in front, and two suited men exit the vehicle.

They push through the crowd to the bar, where a large man in an apron stands pouring drinks at a back shelf.

"Joshua Hibbert?"

"Call me Hibbs."

"We're with the Bureau. This entire establishment is operating illegally. We're going to need you to come with us."

"Sure thing fellas." Hibbs turns around, shotgun leveled at the agents. "Oh, alright if I bring this along?"

The agents look around the room to see the glares of a hundred angry townsfolk focused on them.

"Sorry, fellas. But I think our town's had its fill of being told what to do. Maybe try some other night."

If Herbert West conquered Death read the following.

"Your crimes against our organization are severe, Doctor West."

The shadowed faces scowl from their seats above the mousy figure, standing with a slight grin at the center of the large chamber. "Subversion, conspiracy, murder. By all accounts, we will be terminating your employment with extreme prejudice."

"However, considering your actions of exceptional merit in the events regarding the Arkham outbreak, and the significant strides made in your research, it is the opinion of this board that your past indiscretions can be overlooked. We are willing to offer you a new position as head of our facility in Manhattan."

"If I acccept," West asks, "I will have complete say over the direction of research for this branch?"

"Correct, Dr. West. Did you have plans in mind?"

A moment of excitement flashes across Herbert West's emerald eyes. "I think it's time we greatly expand our testing."

Design Notes

Well, that was certainly a ride!
This campaign has been roughly two years in the making, but the ideas underlying it have gone back even further.

One of my first major boardgames was Arkham second edition. Every other thursday in highschool, the boardgame club would meet in an all-purpose room. Mostly, we played Catan, and later Magic. But always on the shelf was Arkham Horror, luring us in with the fact that there was never time to complete it in the 2 hour window of the meetings.

When I eventually got my own copy, we played it quite a bit, and I personally devoured the text on each card. The game was discarded, eventually - but those nights, lying on a couch in my basement, leafing through the stories in the town of Arkham stuck with me. 2e was so formative to me that it practically tore something within me when I had to change the position of locations from the original map in order to make balance work in the campaign!

Arkham has been somewhere we visit in many of the campaigns. But again and again, it's a minor location - a scenario or two. I had always wondered what the game could do given the "promise" of a locations-shifting consequence mechanic in the "Your House" location from the core set. Hence, I wanted to make something inspired by 2e, where Arkham was a central player in the campaign.

Resident Evil came to me later, surprisingly. But the tales of corruption, both physical and ethical, still hold my fascination. Many of the mechanics in the campaign, and the inclusion of a certain meddling scientist from the fantastically weird Re-Animator film (and okay Lovecraft tale) was a natural pairing, and the raging monster that just won't die is an obvious homage to Jack Baker, Mr. X, and of course, Nemesis.

Baalshandor was a godsend from FFG - The whole Flame and Disease and the King thing is implied in some of the art at the back of the Blood of Baalshandor. The red text can be blamed on my desire to take the "You are Being Hunted" and dial it up to 11 - given that the entity you are fighting controls people when they aren't paying attention, what was more fitting than to punish players with the Ancient One's influence when their eyes dallied where they shouldn't (Something I am personally incredibly guilty of in Arkham campaigns).

I'm so glad you decided to take a chance on my little custom campaign. Hopefully it was worth every hour of tedious entry and referencing, heartbreaking and sleep-schedule destroying playtesting, and annoying my friends by never shutting up about it that went into creating it. I don't know what comes next for me, but I'll always be proud of my own little unholy abomination.

Frequently Asked Questions

What happens when I am moved, but cannot move closer to or further from the target?
You do not move.

When I discard a Spreading Miasma from the game, what happens to the clues on it?
They are returned to the token pool, like any other tokens on a discarded encounter card.

Can I use Sophie/Lucky/Fieldwork on a Defend Test?
You cannot. Defend tests cannot have their skill values increased.

After advancing Act 1 of Dead by Dawn, should the enemy be exhausted?
It should not, but the damage should still be on it.

Enemies in Dead by Dawn have 0 health- Shouldn't they be defeated?
Normally yes - but pay attention to the "Cannot be Defeated" clause on their cards.

Am I required to pick either option in the Dead or Alive interlude?
Yes. No Schrödinger's investigators from here on out.

What happens when I evade an enemy in Act 2 of Mourning Chorus?
No doom is removed. The chorus is growing in intensity, and your chance is closing.

When I defeat Tendrils of the First, what happens to the damage on it?
The damage is removed and it is placed in the victory display as normal.

ERRATA

Scenario 1: Late Risers

- The location "Lab Delta"s ↪ ability should read: "When you investigate this location: Increase its shroud level by 4 for this investigation. If you succeed, investigators at this location may spend 3 clues, as a group, to put the set-aside Ripped Hallway location into play."

Scenario 5: High Noon Descent

- The location "The Left Artery" should have a yellow circle instead of a blue cross as its location icon.
- While reading act 1b, if an investigator does not control Herbert West, the flavor text should be ignored.

Scenario 7: Death at Sundown

- On hard mode, the tablet should read: -4. If you fail, move Tendrils of the First one location towards you.

Scenario 8: The Midnight Hour

- The card Messenger of Flame should read "Forced: At the start of the enemy phase, if Messenger of Flame is at a Miasma location..."
